Nursing Innovators Journal

Chief-editor: Dr. Meena Ganapathy

Editor: Prof. Laishangbam Bijayalakshmi

Publisher: MKSSS Smt. Bakul Tambat Institute of Nursing Education

www.nijbtine.org

From Editorial desk: "Redefining Boundaries: Recognizing Nurses as Innovators."

"Nurses have been the frontlines of promotion, prevention, care, and rehabilitation of people and patients' health and safety. But beyond this lies a less recognized but equally powerful identity — that of the nurses as innovators, critical analytical people, and leaders of change and visionaries."

Our Nurse Innovators journal was launched to publish the research and conversations by nurses about healthcare innovations. Healthcare departments, governing agencies, and the general public have recognized nurses as agents of change; however, scholarly and research articles and practical literature highlighting nurse-led solutions are lacking. This journal aims to address that. This journal will open the space for interdisciplinary dialogue needed in nursing practice. The launch of the journal comes at a moment of critical transformation in healthcare. The challenges we face — from global health inequities and workforce shortages to digital transformation and environmental crises — demand new ways of thinking. Nurses, with their unparalleled proximity to patients and systems, are uniquely positioned to inform.

What do we mean by “nurse innovator”? We see innovation not just in technology or start-ups, but in every instance where nurses challenge assumptions, redesign systems, and imagine better ways of delivering care. It is the nurse in a rural community who adapts mobile phone technology to improve antenatal care. The ICU nurse leads a quality improvement initiative to reduce infections and medication errors. The psychiatric nurse who develops a culturally grounded mental health toolkit for the community. Innovation, in this context, is not always high-tech — it is high-impact!

In this inaugural issue and future ones, we will feature a diverse range of content: original research on nurse-led interventions, field-tested solutions from practice, reflective essays from nurse leaders, and interdisciplinary perspectives that expand our collective imagination. We welcome contributions from nurses in all sectors — clinical, academic, community-based, and entrepreneurial — as well as collaborations with designers, engineers, and policymakers who collaborate with nurses to co-create change.

We hope that this journal is more than a publication. We envision a vibrant ecosystem — a space of dialogue, mentorship, and shared purpose. Whether you are a student with an idea, a frontline nurse solving problems daily, or a scholar exploring the theory of practice-led innovation, you have a place here.

We invite you to read, contribute, critique, and connect. Let this journal be both a record of what is and a catalyst for what could be.

Because innovation is not the future of nursing — it is already here. And it begins with the nurse.

We invite you to read, contribute, critique, and connect. Let this journal be both a record of what is and a catalyst for what could be.

Editorial

Poverty and hungry children with growing population, climatic changes rich becoming richer and poor heading to poverty is what we read in the newspaper. With No insurance to cover basic needs, people die in violence and become human bombs for few hundred rupees. Politics and religion with inhuman behavior to animals and females has been in daily news. Our youths still believe in film stars and hungry to become one like them. At least compulsory education to read and write does not seems to be in our agenda.

Let us look at hunger.

2023 was the International year for cultivating millet, with different varieties from Bajra, ragi to Corn, to making it available to growing children with attractive food menus. India is trying to get to the forefront to eliminate hunger. But with staggering growth in population, the Government is working hard by connecting farmers with IT companies and Institutes of higher studies. The results shown are rewarding! Across the nation, keeping aside religion and politics, with its focus on healthy land -> to focused cultivation-> to children friendly food products and packing. we are reaching there.

Nurses doing their research may concentrate on these National programs in state, taluk and PHC level.

On the left side of this page you will see prominent Nursing personnel working to bring this magazine to you. Dr. Priyesh Bhanwara from Kamdar College of Nursing, Prof. Veeresh V.G from Govt. Group director of Nursepreneur, Article Academy | Unidos EduHub | Reverso Healthcare Pvt Ltd | Healex HomeHealth LLP from Pune and Joseph John MBA from Bangalore. Above all Dr. Meena Ganpati our Editorial Board Chair person.

Spring time now with flowers and sunshine.... let us smile and go forward.
